

Welded-chain slings.

A unique line of welded-chain slings

We, at Lam-E / St-Pierre Group, we specialize in manufacturing welded-chain slings. These versatile chain slings can be used in applications that require flexibility, resistance to cuts, abrasion and high temperature. These multi-purpose slings are unique because they work in situations that call for flexibility as well as resistance to cuts, abrasion and high temperatures. You will not find this line of slings anywhere in Quebec except at Lam-E / St Pierre Group.

Our line of welded-chain slings offers two major advantages. First, because the parts and accessories are permanent, they cannot be modified. Second, under normal use these slings have a longer useful life than some other products. These two advantages allow you to manage your equipment better and offer you a very high degree of safety during use. These two benefits provide better management and increase the safety level while the equipment is being used.

Here are the procedures that guarantee this heightened quality.

Certified welders

Welding parts is a critical step. Our welders are certified by the Campbell Chain manufacturer.

Our welders are tested regularly during the year to consolidate and perfect their skills.

Attention to quality

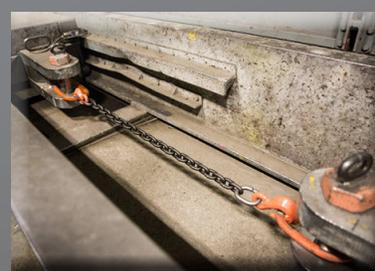

We always ensure the best possible finish.

Heat treatment for greater strength

We perform a heat treatment to increase hardness. During the first stage, the temperature is raised to several hundred degrees.

We then carry out a dipping operation to alleviate the stress of the tempering process.

Compliance testing

For greater safety, each weld is checked before being tested to 200% of its capacity.

Our welded-chain slings are accompanied by a certificate, and we provide a test graph on request. Our slings always have a metal tag certifying compliance and capacity.
